

Keynote:

How to deliver Quality On Time

The right results at the right time, no excuses needed

Presenter:

Niels Malotaux

Synopsis:

Development projects seem to struggle with delivering the right results at the right time. Still, every time I coach a project team, they almost immediately start delivering better results in less time, allowing them to deliver successfully on time, or earlier. So, what are the secrets that make this happen?

Bio:

Niels Malotaux (niels@malotaux.eu) is an independent international product development coach, and expert in optimizing organisational, management, project, and team performance. He has some 45-year experience in designing electronic and software systems, at Philips Electronics, 20 years leading an electronic systems design company, and since 1998 helping projects to deliver Quality on Time: delivering the Right Results at the Right Time, enabling customer success. From time to time he still develops electronic products for clients, which allows him to understand the pitfalls of developers first hand.

Since 2001 he taught and coached well over 400 projects and teams in 40+ organizations in the Netherlands, Belgium, China, Germany, Ireland, India, Israel, Japan, Poland, Romania, South Africa, the UK and the US, which led to a wealth of experience in which approaches work better and which work less well in practice.